Who Would Have Thought it? The following very candid and truthful paragraph we clip from the editoral columns of the Dayton Weely Gazette, of November 26th, and we confess it strikes us very pesoin, and we confess it strikes us very pe-culiarly, coming as it does from one of the "organs" of that party who have been so "organs" of that party who have been so ZToys! CRIMB AMONG FUGITIVE NEGROES.-Canas runaway negroes, is beginning to feel the legitimate effects of the servile fugitive emigration. Of ten persons convicted at the Kent County assizes, recently held at Chatham, seven were negroes. Levi Harris, negro, was sentenced to the paritanticus. "Cursed by the population of runaway negroes," that is the word, is it? It is just what we have ever been preaching to these gentlemen, but they have kept their ears so stuffed with wool that they couldn't, or wouldn't hear the truth. They have been told time and again, and the assertion substantiated by faces and figures, that "the stantiated by faces and figures, that "the legitimate effects" of their dishonest policy would be the increase of every species of grime and rascality throughout the country, particularly "that portion cursed by the population of runaway negroes," but we did not expect so soon to hear one of the High Priests of the Order, candidly admitting the fact. The truth is, they have never for one moment been actuated by any sentiment of real sympathy for the negro, in their dishonest and dirty business. No, indeed; it was not from any feeling of friendship for the "poor slave" that they would lend them. selves and give of their means to steal him from his legitimate owner, where he was provided and cared for, and thrust him into the world to take care of himself, without the means or ability of doing so, and where while the means or ability of doing so, and where the world to take care of the state of the means or ability of doing so, and where the "legitimate effects" of his position would bottle. Give me a call. PHILIP WALTZ. if it were not already inherent in him, and water, and he becomes a "curse" to that portion of the country where he dwells. It is not sympathy for the negro that actuates these men, and their profession of the sentiment is most hypocritical—it is the prospect.
